How to End the Inventory Nightmare

Kettering Health Network annually filled over 1,000 square feet of warehouse space and faced ongoing obsolescence of hundreds of thousands of dollars of apparel stock to due always buying in bulk to put employees in custom branded uniforms.

Large inventories of apparel also tied up vast quantities of cash and required overstocking to cover fluctuation in hiring and sizing forecasts. Even more stock was wasted when branding and color preferences changed.

With 24/7/365 access to single orders shipped directly to each employee's home, more employees are brand compliant in less time with no inventory, no obsolescence, and no carrying costs.
